- Moving from central command to central orchestration. In line with the above point, effective collaboration across functions so as to maximise performance will be critical in the recovery phase of this crisis. As such, a leader's role should be amended to reflect this.

How to Build Business Resilience & Recovery After a Crisis

The crisis we face as a global community must be understood not only as a public health crisis, or as an economic crisis of the capitalist mode of production, but also, fundamentally, as a crisis of the reproduction of life. In this sense, it is a crisis of care: the work of caring for humans, non-humans, and the shared biosphere.
