The New History of South Africa brims with fresh insights and a fresh approach to the story of this turbulent and fascinating country. Up-to-date international research is woven into a readable narrative history written by 28 of South Africa's top historians and edited by two heavy-weight authorities.

"new history", the book unfolds a credible history of South Africa, not one that answers to this or that morality or which offers therapy to those who had been "losers" or "victims" in South African history. Finally, this "new history" retains the best of the various "schools" of our history, transcending them all.

"This magisterial history throws a floodlight on South Africa's current crisis by examining the past. The absurdity of the apartheid philosophy of racial separatism is underscored by the author's argument (backed with convincing research material) that the genes of the nation's first hunter-gatherers are inextricably mixed with those of modern blacks and whites. . . .
